James White Joins IpX as Principal Digital Transformation Strategist

DENVER, Colorado, 25 February 2019 — The Institute for Process Excellence (IpX) is thrilled to announce that James White has joined IpX as Principal Digital Transformation Strategist. James has more than 30 years of experience in product lifecycle management (PLM), additive manufacturing (AM), computer-aided technologies (CAx), and global business process transformation within the industries of Hi-Tech, medical device, automotive, aerospace, heavy industrial, consumer packaged goods, petroleum, and software.

James brings to IpX a wide experience of roles in areas including product management, sales, strategic alliances, net profit interest, product complexity reduction, large scale PLM design and implementation, and business transformation consulting as well as an education in Engineering and Marketing & Business.

With a focus on digital transformation of systems, data, and processes in industry, James will support IpX by leading digital transformation projects using the True North Enterprise Calibration model to ensure successful implementations of enterprise systems such as PLM, and end-to-end AM. Please help us welcome James to the IpX family.
